George C. Marshall

Basketball

George C. Marshall was born in Lubbock as the youngest of five children. After his family moved to Austin, he attended Kealing Jr. HS where his basketball skills as a shooting guard began to develop as he led the team to a district title. He played for Lawrence Britton at L.C. Anderson HS as word spread that if Marshall "can see it, he can hit it." He was averaged 16.2 ppg, 4 rpg, and made 80 percent of his free throws.

Marshall graduated from Austin Community College with a certificate in welding. He continued to play basketball in the Pan Am League and in recreation centers in Austin and even in his 60s kept his "dead eye" for the basket.

He worked 18 years and retired from the Texas Employment Commission. He has a daughter and granddaughter and is a member of the Church of Christ.
